CONTEXT

Biographical history:	Lord Sackville Cecil (1848-1898) was the eldest son of the 2 nd Marquess of Salisbury by his 2nd wife, Lady Mary Catherine Sackville-West. He took his degree at Cambridge University and worked for Sir Charles Tilston Bright, studying the making, testing and working of telegraph cables during the laying of the West India and Panama, and of the Panama and South Pacific cables. He became director of several telegraph companies and at the time of his death was Chairman of the Brazilian Submarine Telegraph Company. He also had an interest in the railways and became Assistant General Manager of the Great Eastern Railway and General Manager of the Metropolitan District Railway. He died unmarried in 1898.
Archival history:	The papers are one of a number of collections (including those of her mother, Lady Derby), that were bequeathed by Colonel Reginald Cecil to Angela Cecil in 1931. Colonel Reginald Cecil was the grandson of Lady Derby and nephew of Lord Sackville Cecil.
Acquisition:	The papers were transferred to Hatfield House Archives, ca. 1970, following the death of Angela Cecil.
